

Apparently, the FCC is sending the message that media conglomerates can use the public airwaves to promote the interest of Republican candidates. The latest manifestation of the FCC's failure to fulfill its obligation to require that the airwaves be used to serve the public interest is Pappas Telecasting Companies' 'donation' of $325,000 in airtime to Republican candidates in certain areas.

Your agency is a joke.